

LAWYERS CAN INCREASE YOUR PROFITS!

Hiring a top commercial lawyer can add significant profits to the bottom line of any business. A good commercial lawyer is able to help all businesses in a number of ways.

PETER LYNN

- 1. Disputes – all businesses need contracts and to operate on terms and conditions that are favourable to them to ensure that clients pay what is due and to maximise returns for the company.
- 2. Employment – good contracts of employment and procedures can prevent disciplinary problems and can help retain key workers and prevent loss of goodwill.
- 3. Regulatory Issues – involving a good commercial lawyer early can prevent many problems with regulators and government agencies, but they could also find lucrative tax positions which directors may otherwise have ignored.
- 4. IP – business copyrights, trademarks and patents need to be properly registered and protected as to lose it can have a devastating impact on profitability. Beefing this up with good commercial litigators who are prepared to protect companies' assets is vital.

"No matter what sector you operate in, our experience, knowledge and dedication will be available to your business as and when you need it"

Preventing Legal Problems for Your Business

5. Contacts – Most commercial lawyers have a wide client base who can assist your business and be potential clients or suppliers. Using a good commercial lawyer as a networking tool can prove extremely lucrative and most lawyers are very happy to put clients together.

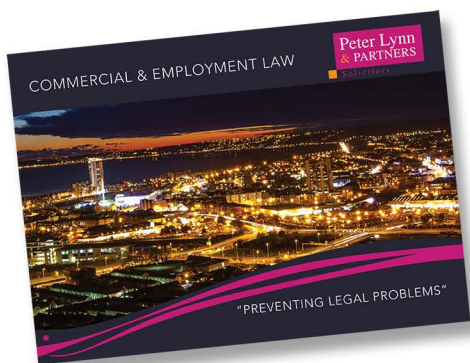

6. Exit Strategy – whatever your business, owners need to ensure that they maximise their return when leaving a business whether that be in an outside sale or a management buyout or management buy in, or merger or acquisition. Good commercial lawyers pre-empt all problems and can give expert business advice to directors, which can improve profitability for the company and owners concerned.
